The past is recognized when we choose to listen and honor it. At times it can go unnoticed and forgotten. The past lives within us making up our social and cultural identities, constantly helping us to better understand our present, while shaping our futures. It can be sad and or inspiring. For some, the past can be boring, a seemingly random listing of dates, places, and names that, in the eyes of a younger person trying to get through their social studies or history class, may mean little. Yet, as we grow older, perhaps wiser (in some instances), we start to see how the past, present, and future are connected. Events, places, and past peoples are intertwined and inform who we are and who we want to be as individuals and members of our own respective communities. We begin to understand the importance of the past.

Located in Troy, New York amongst the ancestral homelands of the Hudson Valley, the Stockbridge-Munsee Tribal Historic Preservation Office's mission in Historic Preservation is aimed at identifying, interpreting, and protecting the Tribe's rich cultural and historical past.

Tribal Council to Extends Shutdown

The COVID-19 pandemic we're all living through is scary and life-changing. It's one of those things we'll tell our grandchildren about—on par with the way life changed during relocation, boarding schools, world wars or the Great Depression. It's bigger than a lot of previous social shifts, not only because of its tragic outcomes, but also because it's affecting so many of us at once and changing every aspect of life from the most significant (work, income, health) to the mundane (the availability of basic products). With unique and uncertain times, bring unique challenges. While we have faced challenges before, this one is different, this time we join with all people across the world in a common endeavor, using the great advances of science and our instinctive compassion to heal and rise to the occasion.

We are at a time where we must, as a tribe, make adjustments as we continue to address the unique challenges due to impact of COVID-19 (coronavirus), pandemic situation and extension of order, and must now also address and adjust our original timeframe to safely reopen our business and government operations. Due to the continuation of public health conditions and governmental isolation orders, the Tribal Council has determined that it is necessary to extend its operational shutdown, except for essential services, until May 24, 2020. The Tribe intends to resume our normal operations on May 26, 2020.

The Tribal Council continues to implement measures to ensure the financial stability and safe operation of our organization daily. As a result, we find ourselves at a difficult crossroad that required us to make some very difficult personnel decisions, which was necessary to ensure our financial stability and safe operation of our organization daily.

By Kolby KickingWoman - Indian Country Today

When Jake Schellinger first visited the National Congress of American Indians Embassy of Tribal Nations in Washington, D.C., in the summer of 2011, he immediately knew it was a place he’d one day want to work if the opportunity presented itself.

Schellinger was then a student at the Arizona State University Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law, and he was spending the summer in the nation’s capital for the Udall Foundation’s Native American Congressional internship program. He recalls being impressed by the building, the people who worked there and the fact that tribal governments had an embassy in Washington, D.C.

Class of 2020

To the Class of 2020 the Mohican Nation extends our congratulations and well wishes and wants to acknowledge how very proud we are of you and your hard work. We recognize for thousands of high school seniors, college students and parents across our area, graduation season signifies both endings and beginnings. Traditions and celebrations like graduations provide a rite of passage from one season to another. Symbolic moments serve as spiritual, relational and emotional transitions to highlight parts of our lives we can let go and aspects of our future we can grab onto.

At times like this we tend to question whether graduation is merely the closing of one door and opening of another, or is it a time to reflect and connect with one another in a deeper way? The pandemic challenges of COVID 19 has impressed upon that deepening of connection. Accepting the ending and uncovering the beginning is critical to the health and well-being of your life before, during and after graduation.

It is important to recognize this rite of passage formally and to also reflect and empathize with one another’s feelings of loss, sadness, excitement and joy that will not only help us align expectations and feelings but strengthen our connection to one another during these most challenging times. The Mohican Nation is committed too and will find a way to recognize and celebrate you and your amazing milestone in the coming Class of 2020 continued on page Three:

Capturing History
Heather Bruegl
Director of Cultural Affairs

These are trying and uncertain times. Somedays it can seem quite hopeless. But if we look to history, we know that we have overcome trials before. We are able to read about what happened during other worldwide events such as the Spanish Flu pandemic of 1918. We have first hand accounts of what happened during this time. We know what people were doing and how they were handling things and what daily life looked like. Historians all over the world captured the histories of these uncertain times and hopefully we were able to learn about them.

This time is just as crucial as pandemics in the past. The Covid-19 pandemic is changing the way that we are living our lives from day to day. And because of these changes, we want to hear from you. We are historians and it is our duty to capture history as it is happening. How is the pandemic changing your life? What has it been like living through this?

Please submit your stories so that we at the Arvid E. Miller Memorial Library and Museum can archive them and keep a record of life during this pandemic. You can submit written documentation, video clips, photos, etc. We will take anything. Please submit your histories to: not easy to do, or lightly decided upon.

The Tribal Council recognizes the impact that this shutdown will have on our employees, which include many members of our Tribe and their family members and cannot stress enough how deeply we care about your wellbeing.

We all love to reminisce. That’s part of life. And as long as we keep moving forward, we realize how important it is to look back with laughter and happiness at the great blessings in our lives. We’re defined by what we’ve learned and the people who helped shape us into the women and men we are today. The product of who we become is a powerful sum of maturity and lessons learned.

In fact, the roots of the word “emergency” come from the Latin “emergere” meaning to rise up or out. Here are a handful of lessons we’ll surely learn—by building our capabilities for the years to come as we face this uncertainty togeth- er and rising to the occasion, as you’re stretching beyond any limits you might have thought you had—not by choice—but by necessity.

The good news is these hard times can be the catalyst for new hab- its, behaviors and lessons. We’re finding perspective by learning to operate our patience button (or just find it) and taking the long view. We’re learning more about resilience and our response by expanding our adaptability and coming up with creative ways to remain connected and centered. We’re reinforcing our appreciation for the simple things. All of these will pay off for us today, but also in the new normal of tomorrow.

As we continue this path of uncertain- tly, we recognize this is an extra-ordinary situation and are trying to responsibly manage tribal re- sources and protect the needs of our members and employees. We look forward to everyone returning to work again, being together again, reuniting with our friends and family members again, but in the meantime, we ask you to re- main optimistic, safe and patient, as we look forward to seeing you again.

We are incredibly proud of your contributions and dedication to our tribe and want you to know you are truly appreciated. We continue to keep your health, safety and well- being in the forefront of everything we do. We hope in the time ahead everyone will be able to take pride in how they responded to this difficult challenge. We are amazed by the displays of kindness, resil- ience, and strength that our com- munity and employees have ex- hibited, and take comfort in the fact that better days are ahead. “Although the world is full of suffer- ing, it is also full of the overcoming of it.” — Helen Keller.

Missing and Murdered Native Women and Girls - National Day of Action

On Tuesday, May 5, 2020

During the period of 1979 through 1992, homicide was the third-leading cause of death of Indian females aged 15 to 34, and 75 percent were killed by family members or acquaintances. In 2005, the movement for safety for Na- tive women resulted in the inclusion of the “Safety for Indian Women” title within the Violence Against Women Act. A study released by the U.S. Department of Justice has found that in some tribal communities, American Indi- an women face murder rates that are more than 10 times the national average. Over the last decade awareness of this national issue has in- creased but more must be done to stop disappearances and save lives. Please join us on May 5th, 2020, as we honor missing and murdered Indigenous women and to- gether increase our nation- al awareness and demand change at the tribal, federal and state levels.

Warm greetings, all, from the homelands. I would like to humbly take some space in the newspaper to share the latest from repatriation—a refresher on the law and some highlights of repatriation “works-in-progress” that we hope to complete this year on our community’s behalf when the Cultural Affairs department reopens from the shutdown.

The charge of our historic preservation program’s repatriation area is to seek to return tangible elements of our Mohican and Munsee cultural heritage. This includes working to respectfully rebury ancestors and their grave items and returning historical and cultural items to our museum. It is sort of the counterpart to the other area of work—reviewing construction projects (Section 106) to avoid impacting sites—in that repatriation takes place when ancestors or items are already out of the ground and have become part of a collection.

The main Federal law that we rely on to assist with this meaningful work is NAGPRA (Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act). NAGPRA only applies to Federal actions or entities, or to museums that receive federal funding. In addition, the scope of what we can repatriate is limited only to 1) Human Remains and related Burial Objects, 2) Sacred items needed for use in religious ceremonies, and 3) Items of Cultural Patrimony. On behalf of the Tribe, I review inventories of collections to make the case for why the remains or items a museum has are more than likely related to Stockbridge-Munsee today. Of course, we often work jointly with other Tribal Nations, such as the Delaware Tribe and Delaware Nation, for repatriation from shared territories.

Having a physical base in the east with our extension office, I have been able to take the step of visiting the ancestors and place medicine with them as we snake our way through the paperwork of the NAGPRA process, so that they know we love them and relatives will be coming back for them.

For the third NAGPRA category of cultural patrimony, we need to make a case that an item a museum holds belongs to our entire Nation (not one individual), and possesses ongoing cultural and historical importance to our community today. Currently, we are pursuing the repatriation of John Quinney’s powder horn, which had been on a loan last year, to make the case that the powder horn is an item of cultural patrimony to Stockbridge-Munsee. Our statement described that it has evolved far beyond its original utilitarian purpose to be a socio-political symbol of Mohican leadership. The owner, the Oshikosh Public Museum, has expressed their support and we are awaiting the shutdown to be lifted to continue consultation. We are hopeful that Quinney’s powder horn will be coming soon to a museum near you—the Arvid E. Miller Library Museum.

Beyond NAGPRA, we can and do always seek to return historical items to our community wherever possible by an outright donation if from private individuals or other non-Federal entities. For instance, a generous family in Stockbridge, Massachusetts has verbally expressed their intention to donate a mid-1700s Mohican wooden ladle that is carved with a bird head shape on the handle. I have conducted research on the item and shared among our Committee members. We are hoping to respectfully carry out repatriation together with the family this year.

We are also closely pursuing an opportunity to receive a late-1700s historical document signed by 10 of our Mohican sachems in Stockbridge (see Mohican News article Dec. 1, 2019). This item will be voted upon at a rescheduled June annual Town of Stockbridge Mass. Meeting. Rest assured, if work can safely resume by then, we will attend to speak to the document’s importance to the Tribe.

Beyond objects, with regularity we receive calls and letters from property owners, historical societies and other non-Federal entities who have human remains they wish to return. These are often items a long-deceased family member had looted and there is often scant information provided. At the moment, there are about 8 different active projects of this nature that we plan to carry out when work resumes with the goal to lay the ancestors to rest.

I hope that this offers some insight into the emotional, important and deeply meaningful work of repatriation. It is an honor to carry out this mission on behalf of our ancestors and future generations. Hopefully we can return to these pursuits soon and be successful at bringing more of our cultural heritage home. More to come!
Stockbridge-Munsee Public Safety Message:

April 12-17 was National Severe Weather Week

Even though the state is doing a virtual tornado drill instead of the usual Statewide drill, we at Public Safety are asking the Community to practice your tornado drill with your family.

If you need to go to a tornado shelter, either the Stockbridge-Munsee Community Shelter or the Family Center will be available, masks will be given out when entering and they must be worn at all times while in the shelter.

A safe distance of 6 feet is required while in the shelters.

Hello, I hope this letter finds you all well and healthy during this uncertain time in the world. Due to the disproportionate number of deaths when elders are infected with COVID-19, the State of Wisconsin recommends, and the Tribe is taking special precautions to protect your loved ones.

We, at the Ella Besaw Center, continue to follow recommended guidelines to keep your loved one safe. We are now into week four of self-isolation, which means we are not allowing visitors in, or residents to leave, unless it is medically necessary.

Additional steps taken to ensure our residents safety include, no communal dining or group activities. We screen all employees at the door for fever and signs and symptoms of COVID-19. Any employee exhibiting signs of illness will not be allowed to work until meeting the specific requirements to return. Any resident who exhibits signs or symptoms of COVID-19 will be isolated in their room until a medical provider can be consulted to provide instructions. These practices are consistent with the recommendations of the Wisconsin Department of Health. We continue to have several means for you to be able to reach out to your loved one. We receive mail three times a week and have the capability to skype, facetime, etc. for anyone who would like to. Please continue to reach out to your loved one any way that you can.

We will update the main phone number, (715) 793-4537, when there are any changes in visitation, you may also call the number and speak to staff at any time if you have questions or would like to set up an alternative way to visit with your loved one. If, at any time, you would like to remove your loved one from the facility during the state of emergency, you may do so, and the resident’s room will be held.

As always, we are dedicated to preserving and improving the health, safety and well-being of the residents of the Ella Besaw Center. Your patience and understanding is greatly appreciated. For more information you can go to www.dhs.wisconsin.gov/covid-19/ltc.htm.

Before anyone questions my credentials, you're right, I'm not a mother. I forgot to have kids, okay? But just because I haven't been a mother doesn't mean I don't know anything about motherhood. After all, I had a mother. So did you.

I still have my mother. She is Marion (Dee Dee) Davids Shubinski, and she'll turn 95 in the week before Mother's Day. Because of this pandemic, I can't make my usual monthly visit to Illinois to see her. I'm sure there are lots of us fervently hoping to be able to hug our moms again once they find a vaccine or a cure.

I think about my cousins, most of them already experienced with not being able to just go hug their mothers. I've been acutely aware of this eventuality since I was nine years old, when my grandmother Mammasis (Eureka Davids) died. I stood next to my mother in the Lutheran Church of the Wilderness, and as we stood to sing "Abide With Me," my mother cried and cried and cried.

The bond between mothers and their children is strong. It doesn't matter if you've had a good or a bad mother. My mother was a nurse. For part of her career she worked the night shift on a hospital psych ward for troubled kids. She told me once that some of those kids had been brutalized by their mothers. One of them had burn marks on his body from where his mother had burnt him with a hot iron. And in the middle of the night on the psych ward, he cried and cried and called out—for his mother.

We all know the ideal of motherhood, and some of us are lucky to have experienced it, some of us more often than not. I hope your heart is rushing with gratitude for the mother you had right now, whatever her faults.

Because mothers aren't born that way. They start out as infants and grow into toddlers and young girls and girls and teenagers and young women before they become adult women, and some of them become mothers before they get all the way there. Mothers are human.

My mother tried to teach me that. She didn't like us watching Leave It to Beaver and The Brady Bunch. Those mothers aren't real, she said.

I get now what she was trying to say. Mothers are just women, like most people, trying to do the best they can, with a whole host of different tasks to juggle and problems to solve and people to care for, in addition to being a human being on whatever journey they're on, with their own attendant hopes and disillusionments, disappointments, and dreams. So, we ought to forgive our mothers for being human beings and making mistakes.

I'm thinking right now about one of my dearest friends, who was fifteen years old when her mother committed suicide. She told me that when your mother commits suicide when you're fifteen, the worst possible thing that can happen to you has already happened. It puts everything else into perspective by comparison. My friend is one of the most cheerful people I know. She's one of the most cheerful people I know! But Mother's Day has got to be a mixed bag for her. She has two grown children of her own now. But yesterday she told me she wasn't sure her mother ever wanted to be a mother, ever wanted to have her. And after a beat of sympathy, I told her that I didn't care what her mother wanted; I'm glad her mother had her! Kick-your-heels-up-in-the-air-girlfriend happy, because I got a wonderful friend out of it. And in that moment, that spark of joy we both felt, is where the secret is.

Mothers bring life into the world. My mother, after surviving colon cancer, taught me to celebrate everything, literally everything. Every event can be a cause for celebration, because life itself is a gift worth celebrating.

But celebrating can take different forms. I have cousins and friends who have lost their children, from still in the womb to a year old to thirty years old. I've witnessed their agony and their beautiful journey with grief, and I call it beautiful because it is a journey born of love, never-ending, never-dying, never-fading love. Every year, every birthday, every death day, and every Mother's Day awakens that grief anew.

What a commitment it is to love! And to keep on loving!

I think of would-be mothers, women who can't have kids of their own, and who for various reasons aren't able to adopt kids. There's a special sadness there, and more love.

My Aunt Dot never had kids of her own. Us nieces and nephews, we were all her kids in a way, I guess. I remember her telling (and my cousins re-telling) stories of how she revered her mother (Mammasis) and the life lessons her mother taught her of grace and humility.

My mother told me about the time she was a teenager, and she wanted to go out with her friends, and how her mother wouldn't allow her to go. It's a good mother's job to watch out for her kids, to use vigilant discipline to prevent dangers. My mom was mad, but later in the day, Mammasis told her, "I was so happy when I heard you singing on the stairs, because I knew then that you'd forgiven me." My mom told her mom, "I only sing when I'm MAD!" And every time she told me this story, she said she wished she could take it back.

I know some people whose mothers have dementia. Their mothers no longer recognize them sometimes. They don't remember what it's like to have a real conversation with their mother. They're grateful that until this pandemic they could still visit their mothers and hug them. They both still have and don't have their mothers. Sometimes the love a child has for her mother has to be enough for now, reflecting back the love their mother had for them.

My cousins who've lost their mothers support me to visit mine every chance I get. I have, and I'm even more grateful now for that, because it's hard not knowing when (or if) I'll be able to hug her and be hugged in return. She's safe at home with Pop for now.

My best friend from high school died of breast cancer when we were fifteen. She left behind a teenage daughter. I sought her out at the wake. I don't know why, exactly. Something about the unfair, unchosen disruption in the mother-daughter bond compelled me. I didn't expect her to pay me much mind; I was practically a stranger to her. But as I told her of the hopes and dreams and love her mother had for her, what a good friend her mother had been, and what kind of human being her mother had been, and the choices she'd made, this teenager listened with fervent and rapt attention.

We can all celebrate our mothers this Mother's Day. At the very least they gave us life. Whatever you love about your life, about being alive, you have because your mother had you. I'm grateful that in addition to having me and all my siblings, my mother is a woman of strong will and sometimes outrageous playfulness, with a spirit of adventure and a love of books and puzzles and music and science and the arts, for learning and for entertainment. I'm lucky to have been allowed to experience the maturation of that mother-daughter bond, to learn to accept her for who she is and to love her as she is. This hasn't always been easy. In some respects, we're very different, which is why we love each other. When I'm with her, I focus on what we have in common.

If you still have your mother, love her. If your relationship with her is rocky, you have because your mother had you. If you can't love your mother, do what my friend did, the one who lost her mother to suicide, and find other mothers to love, and other people to mother you. Or be the mother you wish your mother could have been to you, to your kids or your friends or anybody who could use a mother's love, which is all of us.

Motherhood is about the ties that bind, whether by choice or happenstance. While we try to love each other as we are, for who we are, we can also look to the ideal of motherhood for guidance. Be patient with one another while we grow in love and understanding; bring out the best in one another; inspire and encourage one another; find things to laugh about together. Be aware of every single good thing that happens, no matter how big or small.
COVID-19 is a respiratory illness that displays symptoms like fever, cough, and shortness of breath. Symptoms may appear 2-14 days after you’ve first been exposed to the virus, or not at all. New information about COVID-19 suggests that people who do not feel sick may still be able to spread this disease. In response, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is now recommending that you cover your face when in crowded public settings, such as at grocery stores. Face coverings are not enough to keep you from getting sick. However they can reduce the chance that you could infect other people. Wearing a face covering is currently voluntary nationally, but check your Tribe’s policies and recommendations before going out.

This new recommendation does NOT replace recommendations to use Social Distancing. You should still:
- Avoid going to public places when possible
- Stay at least 6 feet away from other people when outside of your house
- Stay at home, and away from other people in your household if you feel sick
- Wash your hands often with soap and water, or use alcohol-based hand sanitizer

Food
- Stay separated. The person who is sick should eat in their own room if possible.
- Wash dishes and utensils using gloves and hot water (handle unwashed dishes, egg shells, and food residue with gloves). Wash them with soap and hot water in an automatic dishwasher.
- Clean bowls before taking off gloves or handling used items

Trash
- Dedicated, lined trash can: If possible, dedicate a lined trash can for the person who is sick. Use it for disposing of garbage and handling of waste. Wash hands afterwards.

What type of face covering should I wear? You could cover your face with any variety of masks, respirators, or cloth face coverings (collectively referred to as "face coverings"). However, CDC recommends you use a cloth face covering. You should not use a medical mask or medical respirator, since we need to make sure there are enough medical face masks for healthcare workers.

Social distancing includes:
- Avoiding handshakes and crowds
- Staying 6 feet away from people
- Staying at home (and only going out for food, exercise, medicine, and emergencies)

To help with social distancing:
- Use food and medication delivery services instead of going out
- Use a mask or cloth face covering when leaving the house

Ways to cope
- Reaching out to family and/or friends is one of the best ways to reduce anxiety, depression, loneliness, and boredom during social distancing, quarantine, and isolation

Use the telephone, email, text, messaging, and social media to connect with friends, family, and others.

Talking face to face with friends and loved ones using Skype or FaceTime.

If approved by health authorities may close, as well as sports events and your health care providers, arrange for your friends and loved ones to bring you newspapers, movies, and books. These items can be left on your doorstep. Avoid the usage of taxi cabs or ride shareshares as a means of transportation to decrease chances of exposure.

WINTERGREEN

Usage

Wintergreen is good for many kinds of stomach ache, heartburn, acid stomach, acid reflux, food poisoning, and nausea. The entire plant including the leaves, berry, and the root are used to steep a tea. Wintergreen leaves can also be chewed for stomach ache, heartburn, acid reflux, food poisoning, and nausea. Chew on a wintergreen leaf until symptoms improve. Our people used to chew these leaves like a gum as well.

Preparation and Dosage

Use one tablespoon of wintergreen to one cup of water and steep for fifteen minutes. Drink one cup and this will help soothe the stomach. Drink as needed. This tea can be refrigerated for two weeks.

Gathering

Wintergreen grows all over our area near river banks and lakes growing to be about two inches tall with shiny leaves and has a red berry. Gather this in August and pull the entire plant up including the root and the berry.

Preparation

Let them dry in a basket for about three months where they then will be ready to store for the year in a glass jar.

WILD ONIONS

Onions

Native Word, Wiinoonzhuyak

Usage

Any kind of onion can be used to treat pneumonia especially in babies by pounding up one large onion in a cloth bag so it will not spill out on to the person, heat it up with a flat iron and apply it to the chest of the baby. The onions will turn black and draw out the pneumonia. Onions can also be used for fever reduction by cutting up one large onion and putting half on the bottom of one foot and half on the other foot and wrapping them for the night. By the morning, the fever will be gone and the onions will have turned black. The onions can also be chopped up and placed on the feet as well.

There are many stories from our people about the healing properties of onions, a very commonly used Medicine of our people.

Preparation

Onion cough syrup, good for coughs and congestion, can be made by chopping up one large onion, boil it for five minutes, add sugar, honey or maple syrup, boil down further until it is very thick and use the juice as a cough syrup. The consistency of this cough syrup is thicker than that of today’s cough syrups. Take one tablespoon full as needed.

Preservation of Onion Cough Syrup

This Medicine can be refrigerated up to two weeks and it can be used as needed. Before refrigeration, a little whiskey was put into the cough medicine to preserve it so it would not spoil at room temperature.

People across the state of Wisconsin have risen to the challenge of COVID-19 by changing the way they work, play, and interact with friends and family.

By staying Safer at Home, practicing physical distancing, and continuing to wash hands and cover coughs, Wisconsinites are making a difference and beginning to flatten the curve.

According to the model created by DHS, Wisconsin was projected to have 22,000 infections by April 8, which would have ultimately resulted in somewhere between 440 and 1,500 deaths. These numbers were based on projected significant exponential growth in positive cases; however, since the Safer at Home order, there has been a decrease in exponential growth in the number of cases. Wisconsin’s rate of doubling of infections was 3.4 days in early March and, over the past two weeks, the rate of doubling is now approximately 12 days.

“Without effective treatments or a vaccine, the only way to slow the spread of COVID-19 is through non-pharmaceutical interventions that help us maintain physical distancing,” said Chief Medical Officer and State Epidemiologist Dr. Ryan Westergaard. “The Safer at Home order has been our main intervention in Wisconsin, and we are beginning to see the results.”

“Limiting physical contact between people is our only tool at slowing the spread of this virus,” explained Secretary-Designee Andrea Palm. “We will continue to work through our statewide response to develop capacity to implement effective containment strategies across the state. These are critical next steps to prevent a future surge of cases.”

By staying Safer at Home, the people of Wisconsin are taking the steps needed to make a difference during this pandemic. Safer at Home is working, and it is saving lives.

For up-to-date information about Wisconsin’s COVID-19 response, visit the DHS COVID-19 webpage. We encourage you to follow @ DHSWI on Facebook, Twitter, or dhs.wi on Instagram for more information on COVID-19.
The Stockbridge-Munsee Health and Wellness Center will be open to provide services.

The clinic wants to keep you updated about what we are doing to respond to the Coronavirus Pandemic. We have four major goals as we respond to the spread of the virus and threats to the Mohican Nation:

1. To do everything possible to stop the spread of the virus.
2. To test those at greatest risk of getting very sick from the virus.
3. To continue to provide other medical needs safely.
4. To provide accurate information about the virus.

To accomplish these goals, we are changing many of the ways the clinic operates. The most important way to stop the virus is for people to be together in close contact. The clinic changed how services are provided to lower the chances of spread through close contact with others.

Please help us better serve you and keep everyone safe by doing the following:

- If you are NOT sick, don’t come to the clinic.
- If you have concerns, call the triage line at 715-793-5087 or 715-793-5088. Do not come to the clinic without calling. If calls become overwhelming, we will need to take steps to create special phone numbers.
- Patients with other acute medical problems such as injuries, heart problems, or breathing problems will continue to be evaluated. Call the triage line at 715-793-5087 or 715-793-5088.
- Stay at home and avoid unnecessary travel. Practice social distancing. Wash your hands.

Medical

If you have concerns, call the triage line at 715-793-5087 or 715-793-5088. Do not come to the clinic without calling. If calls become overwhelming, we will need to take steps to create special phone numbers.

If triage instructs you to come to the clinic, they will provide instructions on which entrance to use. Anyone with respiratory symptoms will be directed to wait in a separate entrance. Triage will provide instructions where to park.

If a medical provider determines you are severely ill, arrangements will be made to have you transported to a nearby hospital for further evaluation and treatment. If you are not severely ill, you will be sent home and you will be on ISO-LATION which means you cannot leave home. Medical staff will tell you how long you must remain in isolation.

Pharmacy

Pharmacy is open and continues to provide medications to our community. Medical staff and pharmacy are coordinating to have 90-days of medication provided if appropriate. This cannot apply to controlled substances.

Patients who only need to pick up medications should call pharmacy at 715-793-5027. Call ahead of time, prescriptions will be delivered to your car in our parking lot so you do not have to come into the clinic.

Dental

Dental is only seeing patients who have a dental emergency such as severe tooth pain or swelling. Patients who need an urgent dental exam should call dental at 715-793-5019. We may use a separate entrance for the exam.

Behavior Health

Behavior health is conducting phone and telehealth appointments. To schedule an appointment, please call Behavior Health registration at 715-793-3000.

Purchase Referred Care - (PRC)

COVID-19: Individuals with Substance Use Disorders are at high risk for complications

- People who smoke tobacco, vape, smoke marijuana, have opioid use disorder, or use methamphetamine are a very vulnerable population to COVID-19 due to the effects the drugs they are using have on the respiratory and pulmonary (heart) health.
- Those with substance use disorder are more likely to experience homelessness or incarceration which increases the possibility of transmission of COVID-19.
- There is large stigma around substance use disorders which is a major risk factor in someone not getting treated for the virus as quick as someone without a substance use disorder.
- Other risk factors include decreased access to healthcare and disruption to syringe services, medications, and other supports needed.

Smoking tobacco and marijuana/vaping risks:
- Enhanced tissue damage and inflammation in the lungs
- There is limited research with vaping and lung damage, but there is reason to believe that lung damage can occur from vaping
- Lowered ability of the lungs to heal from infections
- Higher chance of developing pneumonia due to lung damage from smoking/vaping

Opioid and Methamphetamine use disorder risks:
- Opioids slow the breathing and put those that use them at higher risk of developing pneumonia and other complications related to COVID-19
- Overdoses are more likely to happen due to social distancing because there is a chance that others are not around to be able to administer naloxone to reverse the effects
- Higher chance of mortality if the individual has COVID-19 due to the virus further compromising the lungs

Preventing Underage Drinking

Office of Children’s Mental Health Director Linda Hall today announces the publication of a new fact sheet detailing how to support our children’s well-being through preventing underage drinking.

While youth in Wisconsin are drinking less, they are still drinking more than youth in other states. Peer pressure, the ease in which youth can obtain alcohol, as well as advertising in the community may encourage unhealthy drinking behaviors.

Highlights include:
- Using alcohol at an early age can lead to negative health outcomes that in turn can lead to, or worsen, symptoms of depression and anxiety.
- Youth tend to binge drink more than adults, which can interfere with normal brain development.
- In Wisconsin, only 36% of kids think it’s risky for them to have 5 or more drinks a couple times a week.

Having short, frequent, casual conversations with young children and throughout adolescence is one of the best interventions.
How to Protect Yourself and Others

Know how it spreads

- There is currently no vaccine to prevent coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19).
- The best way to prevent illness is to avoid being exposed to this virus.
- The virus is thought to spread mainly from person-to-person.
- Between people who are in close contact with one another (within about 6 feet).
- Through respiratory droplets produced when an infected person coughs, sneezes or talks.
- These droplets can land in the mouths or noses of people who are near or possibly be inhaled into the lungs.
- Some recent studies have suggested that COVID-19 may spread by people who are not showing symptoms.

Everyone should

- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds especially after you have been in a public place, or after blowing your nose, coughing, or sneezing.
- If soap and water are not readily available, use a hand sanitizer that contains at least 60% alcohol.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose, and mouth with unwashed hands.

Avoid close contact

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick.
- Stay at home as much as possible.
- Put distance between yourself and other people.
- Remember that some people without symptoms may be able to spread virus.
- This is especially important for people who are at higher risk of getting very sick.

Cover your mouth and nose with a cloth face cover when around others

- You could spread COVID-19 to others even if you do not feel sick.
- Everyone should wear a cloth face cover when they have to go out in public, for example to the grocery store or to pick up other necessities.
- Cloth face coverings should be placed on young children under age 2, anyone who has trouble breathing, or is unconscious, incapacitated or otherwise unable to remove the mask without assistance.
- The cloth face cover is meant to protect other people in case you are infected.
- Do NOT use a face mask meant for a healthcare worker.
- Continue to keep about 6 feet between yourself and others. The cloth face cover is not a substitute for social distancing.

Cover coughs and sneezes

- If you are in a private setting and do not have on your cloth face covering, remember to always cover your mouth and nose with a tissue when you cough or sneeze or use the inside of your elbow.
- Throw used tissues in the trash.
- Immediately wash your hands with soap and water for at least 20 seconds. If soap and water are not readily available, clean your hands with a hand sanitizer that contains at least 60% alcohol.

Clean and disinfect

- Clean AND disinfect frequently touched surfaces daily. This includes tables, doorknobs, light switches, countertops, handles, desks, phones, keyboards, toilets, faucets, and sinks. [https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/prevent-getting-sick/disinfecting-your-home.html]
- If surfaces are dirty, clean them: Use detergent or soap and water prior to disinfecting.

embassy and just being truly amazed by it and just thinking, 'You know, this is the place that I would really, really like to work at someday if the opportunity ever arises,' said Schellinger. Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohican Indians.

Funny how the universe works.

Schellinger was hired at the National Congress of American Indians as a staff attorney in 2017 and went on to serve as its government affairs director through his career, both in and outside the organization. He’s leaving the post next month and, most recently, vice president of government relations. He is returning to private practice in Phoenix.

“It’s been an immensely gratifying experience to work at NCAI and to work with everybody,” he told Indian Country Today. “I’ve learned just a ton from numerous people that I’ve interacted with, both inside and outside the organization.”

During his time at NCAI, Schellinger has worked on everything from the Farm Bill to moving the needle on advance appropriations for Indian Country during a government shutdown. Most recently he’s done a lot of work on COVID-19-related legislation and said it’s something he’ll remember for the rest of his life.

“I think what will be with me throughout my career, both in terms of just incredible, you know, dedication and commitment of so many people across Indian Country and having been able to have sort of a central role in a lot of the work,” Schellinger said. “Not saying that I am more responsible than anybody else or something like that, but just to be a part of the push to get such a significant portion of resources for Indian Country in that bill.”

There’s no doubt he will be missed, said Kevin Allis, Forest County Potawatomi Community, chief executive officer of the National Congress of American Indians.

Allis thoroughly enjoyed working with Schellinger, saying that they had a similar passion and recognition of the importance of how their work impacted Indian Country.

“Jake was amazing, a true professional. Dedicated, disciplined, passionate, and it was reflected in his work,” Allis said. “The thing about Jake is that he knows his material better than anybody I’ve ever worked with. I could ask Jake a question about legislation that passed five years ago, and it could be a very nuanced question, and he would either know it or know exactly where to go get it and have information for me within a very short period of time. Most of the time he just knew it.”

Allis also credits Schellinger for the hard work he put in to reshape the way the organization does policy and advocacy. Allis described advocacy as the “heart of the beast” at the National Congress of American Indians and wanted to make sure they did it right.

They took a more business-like approach and spent a lot of time mapping out who does what and how to gauge success in regards to resolutions that were put forth by membership.

“That was one of my biggest projects coming in, we had to get that right. NCAI was put together in 1944 to advocate for Indian tribes,” Allis said. “That back to basics, back to, you know, where we came from and making sure that was solid and Jake did a wonderful job there with that.”

Schellinger is mild-mannered, even-keeled and humble. You’d be hard-pressed in finding someone who dislikes him. Members of his policy team certainly had nothing but high praise.

Fatima Abbas, Haliwa Saponi, director of policy and legislative counsel, government relations department, valued Schellinger’s willingness to try new things as the policy department grew.

“Jake is an exceedingly hard-working, diligent and committed advocate who set a high bar for NCAI Government Relations work,” Abbas said. “As a NCAI newcomer, I appreciated his openness to innovation and his development of a growing department that is dynamic in order to be responsive to tribal advocacy needs.”

On top of that, Nicholas Courtney, Makah, policy analyst, said Schellinger is a great mentor and knows that right. NCAI was put together in 1944 to advocate for Indian tribes, Allis said. “That back to basics, back to, you know, where we came from and making sure that was solid and Jake did a wonderful job there with that.”

“Since I have arrived at NCAI, Jake Schellinger has been an incredible supervisor, mentor, and has taught me an immense amount about government relations and Indian Country policy,” Courtney said. “I am forever grateful for the time I have had to learn from Jake’s expertise and would not be where I am professionally today without his mentorship. Our entire government relations team is excited to see the successful things Jake does next.”

Schellinger’s next role will be as an associate attorney in Indian Law at the Phoenix Office of Lewis Roca Rothgerber Christie LLP.

While he is leaving the organization, Allis said Schellinger will always be a part of the National Congress of American Indians family and that part of his foundation was built at the organization.

Allis added that Schellinger is going out on top and should be proud of the work he’s accomplished during his time there.

“He’s going out on top and should be proud of himself ‘cause I’m certainly proud of him,” Allis said. “I know my [executive] board is and Indian Country needs to know this and they need to be proud of him also.”

Schellinger echoed those sentiments and was equally thankful to the people he’s worked with over the years.

“I leave this opportunity feeling like I have gained a lot in terms of experience and knowledge,” he said. “I feel like I will never completely leave the NCAI family because there is a huge network of alum.”
